In 2020, Nike Sportswear dressed several of their classic silhouettes such as the Air Max 90, Air Force 1 Low, and Air Max 95 with that of jewelry-inspired accessories. From Cuban links to golden pendants, these blinged-out features have attracted a sizable crowd within the sneaker community, and now they're set to land on one of the Swoosh's newest lifestyle members: the Air Force 1 Low Pixel. Dangling from the middle of the throat, you'll find a gilded chain link that eventually runs down to its crack-patterned Swoosh pendant. Subtle golden accents are also distributed to the dimensional Nike-branded hits atop the tongues, heels, and insoles which are unique to this silhouette. Elsewhere on this pair, the entire uppers are presented with a light grey hue, and feature pleated textures along the tongues and lateral/medial Nike checks. Down below the glitchy sole unit is prepared with a clean white finish. Peep further images here below, and find these dropping on Nike.com in the coming weeks for $100 USD. For other Swoosh-related footwear news, a Nike SB Dunk Low Chinese New Year colorway has popped up.
